America, the foodie-ful

If you're planning to celebrate the National Park Service's 100th birthday, you're likely to work up an appetite. Park your taste buds on the best foods available at these national wonders. BY ALEXANDRA PECCI

COWBOY COOKOUT

Hitch a ride in a covered wagon to the Old West Dinner Cookout ($60 per adult) in Yellowstone National Park. Be on the lookout for bison and elk as you roll down an old stagecoach road from Roosevelt Lodge to the cookout site. There, you'll be serenaded by a crooning cowboy and tuck into steak, baked beans, chuck-wagon corn and coffee brewed over an open fire. yellowstone.nationalparklodges.com

BREW-TASTIC

How do you make the famous water at Arkansas's Hot Springs National Park even better? Turn it into beer! Superior Bathhouse is a circa-1916 bathhouse-turned-brew pub, and the only brewery inside a national park. Don't miss the DeSoto's Folly Golden Stout ($6 for a pint), developed especially to make use of the park's 143° spring water. superiorbathhouse.com

SURF 'N' TURF

Alaska doesn't get wilder—or tastier—than a three-and-a-half-hour Fox Island Dinner Cruise ($74 per adult) through Resurrection Bay. Voyage past glaciers, spot orcas and puffins, and glimpse the shores of Kenai Fjords National Park before stopping at Fox Island for a dinner of wild salmon and crab from Alaska and prime rib. kenaifjords.com

JUICY BEACH READS FOR FOODIES

If you're into chick lit

READ: MARGHERITA'S NOTEBOOK, $16

Enjoy a story that follows one of the oldest plot lines: seducing a man with food. Complete with recipes befitting the book's Tuscan countryside setting, this lighthearted read by Elisabetta Flumeri and Gabriella Giacometti is full of the type of temptation you hate to love, but can't resist.

If you like memoirs

READ: 32 YOLKS, $28

This look into the life of chef Eric Ripert, the talent behind one of New York City's most famed restaurants, Le Bernardin, takes you on a suspenseful ride in and out of the kitchen, complete with moments of heartbreak and surprise, plus plenty of jaw-dropping tales.

If you want fiction that reads like a made-for-TV movie

READ: PASTA WARS, $15

After breaking up with her fiancé, the newly single CEO of a diet-focused pasta company finds love—and a love of carbs—in Elisa Lorello's seventh book.
